

I am a subscriber of Xm satellite radio and I owned and subscriber to satellite radio for about 6 months now and I truly wish I would have gotten it sooner that I did. I am tired of people trying to take away things because they do not like it. Satellite radio is a good thing. I am a huge fan of 80's music and in the state and area that I live I cannot listen to 80's on the radio. So having satellite radio brings me back to my childhood. I also enjoy being able to listen to talk radio or sports talk or even news. I enjoy all of the different channels that are offered on the satellite and while I don't listen to the traffic and weather that much. I am glad that they are there and do not want anything to change about satellite radio. I would think that the FCC has better things to do like trying to tell people what to watch or listen to that they can stay away from satellite radio. For those people who do not like it they can not buy the radio and subscribe to the service it is that simple sorta like turning off the tv when you see something that you find offensive or even the radio. thank you
